Rome, January 5.

THE Pope has called the most pressing Instances to be made to the Emperor for him to declare War against the Ottoman Porte, and his Holiness forgets nothing that may engage his Imperial Majesty to a speedy Declaration thereof. On one side, he represents the imminent Danger that Italy and even the Hereditary Countries of the House of Austria are in, whilst the Emperor prevents, and by his Arms always victorious averts it, declaring that he has Advice that the Turks will bring into the Field next Campaign 200000 Men, whereof 150000 will be employed against Transylvania, Hungary, and Styria, and 150000 against the Venetians and the Pope. On the other hand, to encourage his Imperial Majesty to comply with this his desire, the Holy Father offers not only to permit him to levy the Tenths of all the Ecclesiastical Revenues, Convents not excepted, but also promises that he will himself furnish considerable Subsidies and Sums of Money. Besides these Instances made to the Emperor, the Pope has at the same time written two Letters successively to Prince Eugene of Savoy, knowing the Influence he has upon his Imperial Majesty in this Affair. These Letters are full of obliging and magnificent Expressions, his Holiness treating him as a Hero, and expressing to him that if he can endure his Imperial Majesty to enter into a War against the Infidels, it will furnish him with a noble Field of Glory, wherein he will add new Lawrels to those he has already acquired, and will be reputed, not only during his Life, but as long as the World endures, a Pillar of the Roman Church, which is at present in very great Danger. It appears by this and other Steps that the Pope is in very great Apprehension that the Turks may make a Visit this Campaign to the Patrimony of St. Peter, and that the Nuncio [illegible] Loretto, to carry off the Treasures wherewith the [illegible] become so great a Subject of Veneration, and of the Pope's tenderest Care. Whatever may be the Effect of this, it seems the Court of Vienna have taken the Opportunity of this time, when the Pope for his own Preservation has so much need of it, to make and publish an Edict against the Ecclesiastical Immunities, which contains in Substance, That forasmuch as daily Experience too much shews the sensible Prejudice happening to particular Persons, to the Publick, and even to the Quiet of the Ecclesiastical Order, by the Refuge which many Debtors, Spendthrifts, and other Cheats have taken in Churches, Convents, and other Ecclesiastical Places; his Imperial Majesty, by his Paternal Care, and in Consideration that such sort of Immunities are not agreeable to any Laws Divine, Humane, Civil, or Canonical, which on the contrary exclude such sort of People, to abolish this Abuse hath resolved that such Debtors, Extravagants Cheats, &c. who shall hereafter take Refuge in an Ecclesiastical Place, shall be delivered to the demander by the Superior of the Convent or other Ecclesiastical Place, with all the Effects they shall have saved there; and in case of refusal, the Convents and their Superiors, besides the Reparation due to the Publick, shall be answerable for all the Expences, Damages, and Interests; and in case they persist in their Contumacy, they shall be deprived of all their Temporalities by the Civil Magistrates, to whom it is enjoyned to debar them of all sorts of Provisions and means of Subsistance, till such time as they have expelled the Debtor, &c.

The States-General have declared here, that they will have Satisfaction of the Elector of Cologn, for his having forced their Troops out of Bon; and that if it be not done, they will not quit either Liege or Huy, the Garrisons whereof they have lately reinforced. The Conduct of the Elector of Cologn therein is loudly disapproved of here, and the Emperor has remonstrated to him in a Letter, the Consequences of such a Violence.

The Report that had been spread, that the Emperor had given to the Duke of Lorraine the Government of the Netherlands, had no other Foundation than the extraordinary Kindness his Imperial Majesty shewed to the House of Lorraine while the Elector of Trier was here. But this Court is more prudent, and the Duke of Lorraine has never too much Partiality to the Pretender, for the Emperor to give so much Jealousy to the King of Great Britain and the States-General as that would occasion.

Glasgow, Jan. 7. Thursday the 5th of January 1716, being set a-part by the Presbytery of Glasgow, and within their bounds, for solemn Humiliation and Fasting for the Tokens of God's Displeasure against the Land, which are evidenced from the Unnatural Rebellion raised in it by a Popish and Jacobite malignant Faction; and for praying and crying to God to pardon the Sins of the Land, and to avert his Wrath, and to preserve and bless our King, and the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Royal Offspring, and to bless and prosper his Majesty's Arms, and to guide and direct the Commander in Chief, and other Generals and Officers, and whole Soldiers, and to cover their Heads and preserve them from all Danger, and to give them Success in suppressing the Rebellion.

A little after separating of the Congregations from the Afternoon's Sermon, his Grace the Duke of Argyle surprisingly honoured the City by his coming to it, being a Place that his Eminency of Mind has had the Advantage of the Friendship and Favour of his Grace, and of his most Noble Family, and has been honoured with Marks thereof on several Occasions, especially when under Straits and Difficulties, both of old and of late; and his Grace having rode very quickly through the City, the length of his Lodging, he was immediately waited upon by the Magistrates of the City, who were then admitted to kiss his Hands, and allowed to wait on his Grace next Morning. And accordingly on the 6th, about 10 a-Clock he was attended by the Magistrates, and after some Time spent with them, the Ministers of this City waited upon his Grace: and in a little after, his Grace accompanied by the Magistrates, and by the Right Honourable the Earl of [illegible] numerous Train of other Nobility and Gentry, reviewed the Honourable Colonel Newton's and Stanhope's Regiments of Dragoons, in the Lower Green or Park of the City, and then his Grace accompanied as aforesaid, rode out and viewed the new Fortifications of the City; and upon his Return having dined, his Grace was attended by the Masters of the University in their Robes, and with their usual Formalities; and at 5 at Night his Grace was again attended by the Magistrates of the City, and being accompanied by the Right Honourable the Earl of Selkirk, Lord-Lieutenant of the County, the Earl of Kilmarnock, the Lord Jedburgh, the Master of Rois, the Master of Belhaven, the Honourable Colonels Newton and Stanhope, and several other Officers of the Regiments, and a numerous Train of Gentry, and principal Burgesses of the City, was conducted to the City Merchant-Hall, being a very large and stately Fire-Room, where the Company was entertained with very fine Wines, and a handsome Table of wet and dry Confections, and the Health of our only Rightful Soveraign King George, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family, and of his Grace the Duke of Argyle, General and Commander in Chief of all his Majesty's Forces in Scotland, were drank under a tripple Discharge of the Fire-Arms of a Detachment of the City Voluntiers, and of five Great Guns from the Fortification at the great Bridge: After which, his Grace did the City the Honour to become Burgess and Guild-Brother of the City, and received a handsom Burgess-Ticket and his Health again was drank as their Citizen, which was followed by drinking Prosperity to his Grace's Family; then the other Noblemen and Gentlemen present received their Burgess-Tickets, and their Healths as such were drank: And at his Grace's desire, a Glass was drank to the Prosperity of the loyal City of Glasgow, and many other loyal and noble Healths. The Entertainment was conclued with the following Glasses, viz. To all Friends of our happy Constitution in Church and State, Prosperity to the High and Mighty States of Holland, and to the Immortal and Glorious Memory of of King William, and to crown all, his Majesty King George's Health, and Prosperity to all his Arms. The Company being waited upon, and served by young Gentlemen of the Place, and entertained the whole time with Musick in the Hall, and with the Chime of Musick-Bells; and the Duke thereafter was conducted to his Lodgings: And upon the 7th, about 9 a-Clock his Grace took his Horse at his Lodging, and returned through the City in his Way to Stirling, being accompanied by the Magistrates and most of the chief Inhabitants on Horseback, and a very numerous Train of Nobility and Gentry; and at his mounting his Horse received a Discharge of the great Guns upon the Fortifications at the South End of the City, and a tripple Discharge of those at the Castle-Gate, in his passing through the Upper Gate of the City.
